What are the different types of smart anti-corrosion coatings?

Types of smart anti-corrosion coatings To enhance anti-corrosion performance, several novel multifunctional coatings have been developed in recent years, including anti-fouling coatings, self-cleaning coatings, superhydrophobic coatings, and so on.

Can nanocomposites be used in smart coatings for corrosion resistance?

The incorporation of nanoparticles within a polymer matrix exemplifies the concept of nanocomposites in the context of smart coatings for corrosion resistance. "Smart coatings" are cutting-edge coatings with integrated stimuli-responsive mechanisms that enable self-reaction.

Are self-repairing coatings a smart anti-corrosion system?

Self-repairing coatings are among the most extensively studied smart anti-corrosion systems, offering substantial potential for protecting metals from corrosion.

How does a smart coating protect against corrosion?

In response to environmental changes indicative of increased corrosion risk, the coating can release these inhibitors. By doing so, the smart coating actively neutralizes corrosive agents, mitigating the potential for corrosion initiation or progression (Ni X. et al. 2021; Xu G. et al. 2020).
